

NOVEMBER'S PROGRAM

Lessons from the Field; the Role of Specifications in Design-Build Process.

Presented by: Bob Fuselier and Kelly Cowan, XL Construction

The Program:

This evening's program will focus on Design Build process and examine the role specifications play in a Progressive Design Build process. Can specifications affect the level of competition? Please join us for Lessons from the Field, a discussion led by the experts from XL Construction. Points covered in discussion will be:

1. Define Progressive Design-Build (PDB)
2. Share our experiences using this new, innovative delivery method.
3. Compare and contrast PDB against traditional Design-Build Delivery.
4. Share our lessons learned using PDB.
5. Explore possible reasons why owners may use PDB.

About the Speakers:
Bob Fuselier
and Kelly Cowan, XL

Construction

Bob Fuselier, Project Executive at XL Construction has 25+ years of experience providing executive oversight during preconstruction and construction phases, making sure that the project-specific work plan and the schedule are all accomplished to meet the client's needs. Bob is an adept negotiator and is keenly focused on doing "what is best for the project." Bob will ensure that XL Construction's on-site management team has all the resources to successfully deliver the project

Kelley Cowan, Project Executive at XL Construction and LEED AP, has over 20 years experience in estimating, design management and construction operations. She is not only well-versed in construction innovation and cost trends, but maintains a current understanding of legislation and regulatory requirements affecting public construction. In keeping with her commitment to community and continuous learning, she was a founding board member of the ACE Mentor Program of Greater Sacramento from 2005 to 2011 and focuses on Workforce Development as president-elect of the Sacramento Regional Builders' Exchange
